Monthly consumer survey – September 2023

Modest increase in consumer confidence in September

- Households are more confident about the macroeconomic outlook but more cautious about their own financial situation going forward.

Consumer expectations for the general economic situation have been revised upwards, returning to their July level. Expectations for the labour market over the next twelve months have improved to a level not seen since July of last year.

On a personal level, households only slightly revised their assessment of their future financial situation. Meanwhile, they adjusted their saving intentions downwards, after the uptick recorded last month.
